FIRST FLIGHT TOUR BOOK OUT

to Carry Passengers From London to Cairo in Quick Time or Make Overnight Journey to

BY W. L. MALLABAR.

LONDON, July 26 .- "Upper or lower to get a seat in the observation car.

There will be no dining-car between London and Madrid, as you will get there in plenty of time for lunch, but you can have tea before you get to Constantinople if you wish. Two tickets? Thank you, sir."

This is a sample of the conversations that are expected to take place in the offices of the leading tourist agencies in London in the near future. The agencies have taken up the matter of aeroplane travel with great energy, for taking care of prospective air tourfor taking care of prospective air tour-for taking care of prospective air tourlatis.

Cook's is out with the first booklet regarding the possibilities of aerial travel, in which they announce that they are the "official passenger agents for the principal companies operating aerial lines." Pictures and photographs are shown of the latest types of air liners with cabins de luxe and observation cars. An hourly service between London and Paris is promised, and it is suggested that a person ciding to the French capital, transact his business, have lunch and return to London in time to attend to the correspondence that has accumulated during the few hours of his absence.

In the London fog is on it will be ossible to take a trip to Venice and ted the pigeons of St. Mark's for an our or so during the day; to take a lick journey to Norway in the event to witness the spectacle of the joinight sun, or to make a Saturday of Monday visit at Cairo.

Resorts Prepare for Crowds.

All the seaside resorts in Great Britain are making preparations for taking care of those visitors who may wish to have the experience of flying. Aerodromes are being erected all along the coast and landing places are being laid out for the use of visitors who may arrive in their own planes. The two machines which at present are the most popular for passenger traffic are the Handley-Page and the Graham-White. The former was originally constructed for night bombing work, and is the largest machine now in use. In advertising the fact that this machine will be used for passenger traffic, Cook's call attention to the fact that, it is not a "stunt" machine, so that the traveler need have no fear that the pilot will try to loop-the-loop or perform any other spectacular but useless or dangerous feat.

The speed of the Handley-Page is only about seventy miles per hour at ordinary times attaining.

sengers from throwing empty bottles over the side during the trip.

The machines are so constructed that there will be a plentiful supply of heat, so intending passengers are warned that it will not be necessary to wear special clothing. Also, there will be no necessity for goggles or helmets, as the head will be fully protected by windows and other in-losures.

During Easter the various aerodromes around the country did a good business by carrying passengers on short "flips" at $13 per head. This fee has now been reduced and trips can be taken for $2.50 for about half an hour's that the ones used were willtary planes on test trips.

So far, in spite of the fact that several hundred people took "Jovrides during the Easter holidays, there have been no serious accidents in civilian flights. A special department of the accident branch of the royal air force is now being organized and this will investigate all cases of accidents. It canses of all pilots and will have shown that the operator was at fault.

Another matter under discussion is regarding the advisability of equip-ping signianes with parachutes or some.

The purpose of the two brotherhoods was to secure the freedom of Ireland and establish an "Irish republic." James Stephens was the C. O. I. R., or chief organizer of the "Irish republic," and John O'Mahony was the H. C., or head center, or representative of Stephens in America, in which capacity he was the organizer of the Fenjan Brotherhood.

O'Mahony was elected president under the constitution and thus apparently became president of the Fenian Brotherhood, the "Irish republic," either or both. The coonstitution legalized the bonds when signed by the agent for the "Irish republic."

Bonds Sold Readily.

Patrick Keenan was the agent for he "Irish republic" by appointment rom Stephens, but its seemed to have a hesitation in issuing bonds and a bond issue was put out in $5, $10, $20, $50, $100 and $500 denominations, signed by O'Mahony as agent for the "Irish republic."

The Fenian Brotherhood had an extensive manufacturing the statement of the stat

Trouble came and there were charges of the misuse of funds. The Senate of the Fenian Brotherhood, or "Irish republic," as the case might be, impeached O'Mahony and put him out of his office. Charges were made that $1,000,000 had been collected and only $30,000 accounted for. William R. Roherts was elected president in place of O'Mahony and the Fenians split into two factions. two factions.

Stephens came over from Europe to try to bring the factions together, but he could not tell what had become of the money O'Mahony had collected. He said he had received $30,000 of the money the Irish in America had contributed to free their native land.

After considerable delay there was an audit of O'Mahony's accounts, which showed collections from all sources of $165,000 and accounted legitimately for the expenditure of the entire sum. A meeting of the union men has been called for Monday night, when the men will decide the question of an immediate strike.
